

NDI Announces New President and C.E.O.

Waterloo, Ontario, April 21, 2008 – NDI announced today that Jamie A. Fraser has joined the company, succeeding David G. Crouch as the President and CEO.

Prior to joining NDI, Jamie A. Fraser was most recently Senior Vice President and Group General Manager at Amphenol Corporation (APH on NYSE). Mr. Fraser brings a wealth of experience accelerating growth and profitability across multiple markets and geographies.

David G. Crouch, who announced his succession plan in January 2008 said, “ I am very pleased to have located such an excellent successor. I am confident, given Jamie’s previous experience and successes, that he will expand NDI’s leadership position.”

Jamie A. Fraser commented, “I am excited to lead NDI through the next stage of growth and profitability. I thank David on behalf of all NDI employees for his excellent contribution over the past 25 years and wish him success in all his future endeavours.”

Headquartered in Waterloo, Ontario, Canada with offices in Germany and Hong Kong, NDI is the world’s leading provider of innovative measurement technology with applications that range from imaged-guided surgery to biomechanics and human motion capture to portable metrology solutions for the shop floor.
